President of Mountaintop Insight Consulting, an executive management and organizational development firm dedicated to assisting organizational transformation.

I have more than 25 years of diverse and practical administrative experience in the public sector in two states. This experience affords me a command of the political and administrative environment, the legislative process, political protocol and the activist nature of direct democracy initiatives. Through this experience I have garnered a comprehensive understanding of federal, state and local government operations and have a keen sense of where they connect and disconnect. My work with government agencies at all levels focuses on building community and trust cultures to facilitate intentional decision-making, and purpose driven organizations, that are grounded in compassion.

I hold an Interdisciplinary Bachelor of Arts Degree in both Public Administration and Communications from Marylhurst University and have completed graduate level study in interpersonal communications and organizational leadership. I value my creativity and innovative facilitation style when working with stakeholders, partners and especially the citizen community to reach mutual agreement and solve complex problems.

President of Amistad Associates, a consulting firm, and co-founder of Diversity 2000, a national think tank that focuses on compelling diversity issues. I have been at the forefront of moving the work of race relations and affirmative action into managing diversity, diversity awareness, and working with a varied workforce. I have worked in the public and private sectors for twenty-nine years. I began my consulting career in diversity in 1980 and since 1986, fifty percent of my work has focused on organizational development with local government. For five years, I worked with Pacific Management Systems, a nationally recognized firm and one of the first to provide diversity training. I worked under the guidance of Dr. Price Cobbs, author of "Black Rage" and originator of ethnotherapy and valuing diversity. Currently, I am in the process of co-authoring a book on Latino leadership based on twenty-plus years of conducting Latino Leadership Education and Development Program seminars.

I have a M.S.W. from the University of California Berkeley, School of Social Welfare, where I emphasized organizational planning and community health services. I also have B.A. degrees in Psychology and Latin-American Studies from Sonoma State University.
